

Hardware > Phones > Windows Phone

BaconSync Beta for Baconit (try saying it five times fast) in the works

News

By George Ponder | Published June 28, 2012

 Share

BaconSync is a really neat feature coming to the Windows Phone app Baconit. The feature is still in beta form and should be released to the masses shortly. For those not familiar with Baconit, it is a Reddit.com app for your phone which we have been impressed with and BaconSync looks to make it even more impressive.

BaconSync is a in-browser extension for Baconit that synchronizes read links across multiple phones and browser. It is currently only compatible with Chrome browsers. The extension not only lets you review what you've read from your Windows Phone on your PC but you can send web pages from your PC to your Windows Phone. In these situations you'll receive a toast notification on your Windows Phone that will send you straight to the web page.

BaconSync is an handy extension that works with the app of Baconit rather nicely. The feature is still in beta form and should be released to the masses shortly and in the meantime you can find the free version here at Baconit.com. There is also a donation version available to help support the developers.

 Windows Central

CUISINEER FOR XBOX

COZY COOKING
MEETS CUTE
COMBAT

Cuisineer: A cozy Xbox cooking RPG with a side order of combat

TOPICS

Reddit

George Ponder Former Reviews Editor

George is a former Reviews Editor at Windows Central, concentrating on Windows 10 PC and Mobile apps. He's been a supporter of the platform since the days of Windows CE and uses his current Windows 10 Mobile phone daily to keep up with life and enjoy a game during downtime.

LATEST ARTICLES

1 Hands-on with the new Xbox PC app: a major performance boost on Xbox Ally X

2 Review roundup: RTX Spark's biggest surprise isn't performance

3 Activision marketing chief admits that Black Ops 7 was not a success

4 I opened ASUS' gigantic $2,499 ROG Xbox Ally X20 Pelican case, and there's a lot to unpack, literally

5 Microsoft's new Windows 11 pitch isn't AI. It's a faster, less annoying PC

Windows Central is part of Future US Inc., a leading digital publisher. Visit

